

Burnt Orange Saturdays.

Memories of Texas, family, and Longhorn football.

Concept

For as long as I can remember Saturdays have been game days. No matter what house we're living in or what happened during the week before, my family always gathers around the TV to watch Texas Longhorns football every Fall weekend.

Through times of frequent change (moving through eight houses over eighteen years) Texas Longhorns football has been a staple for my family, a source of pride, excitement, and love.

Through this project I want to communicate the vibrant energy of the fan experience, as well as the unfolding of my life around this football team.

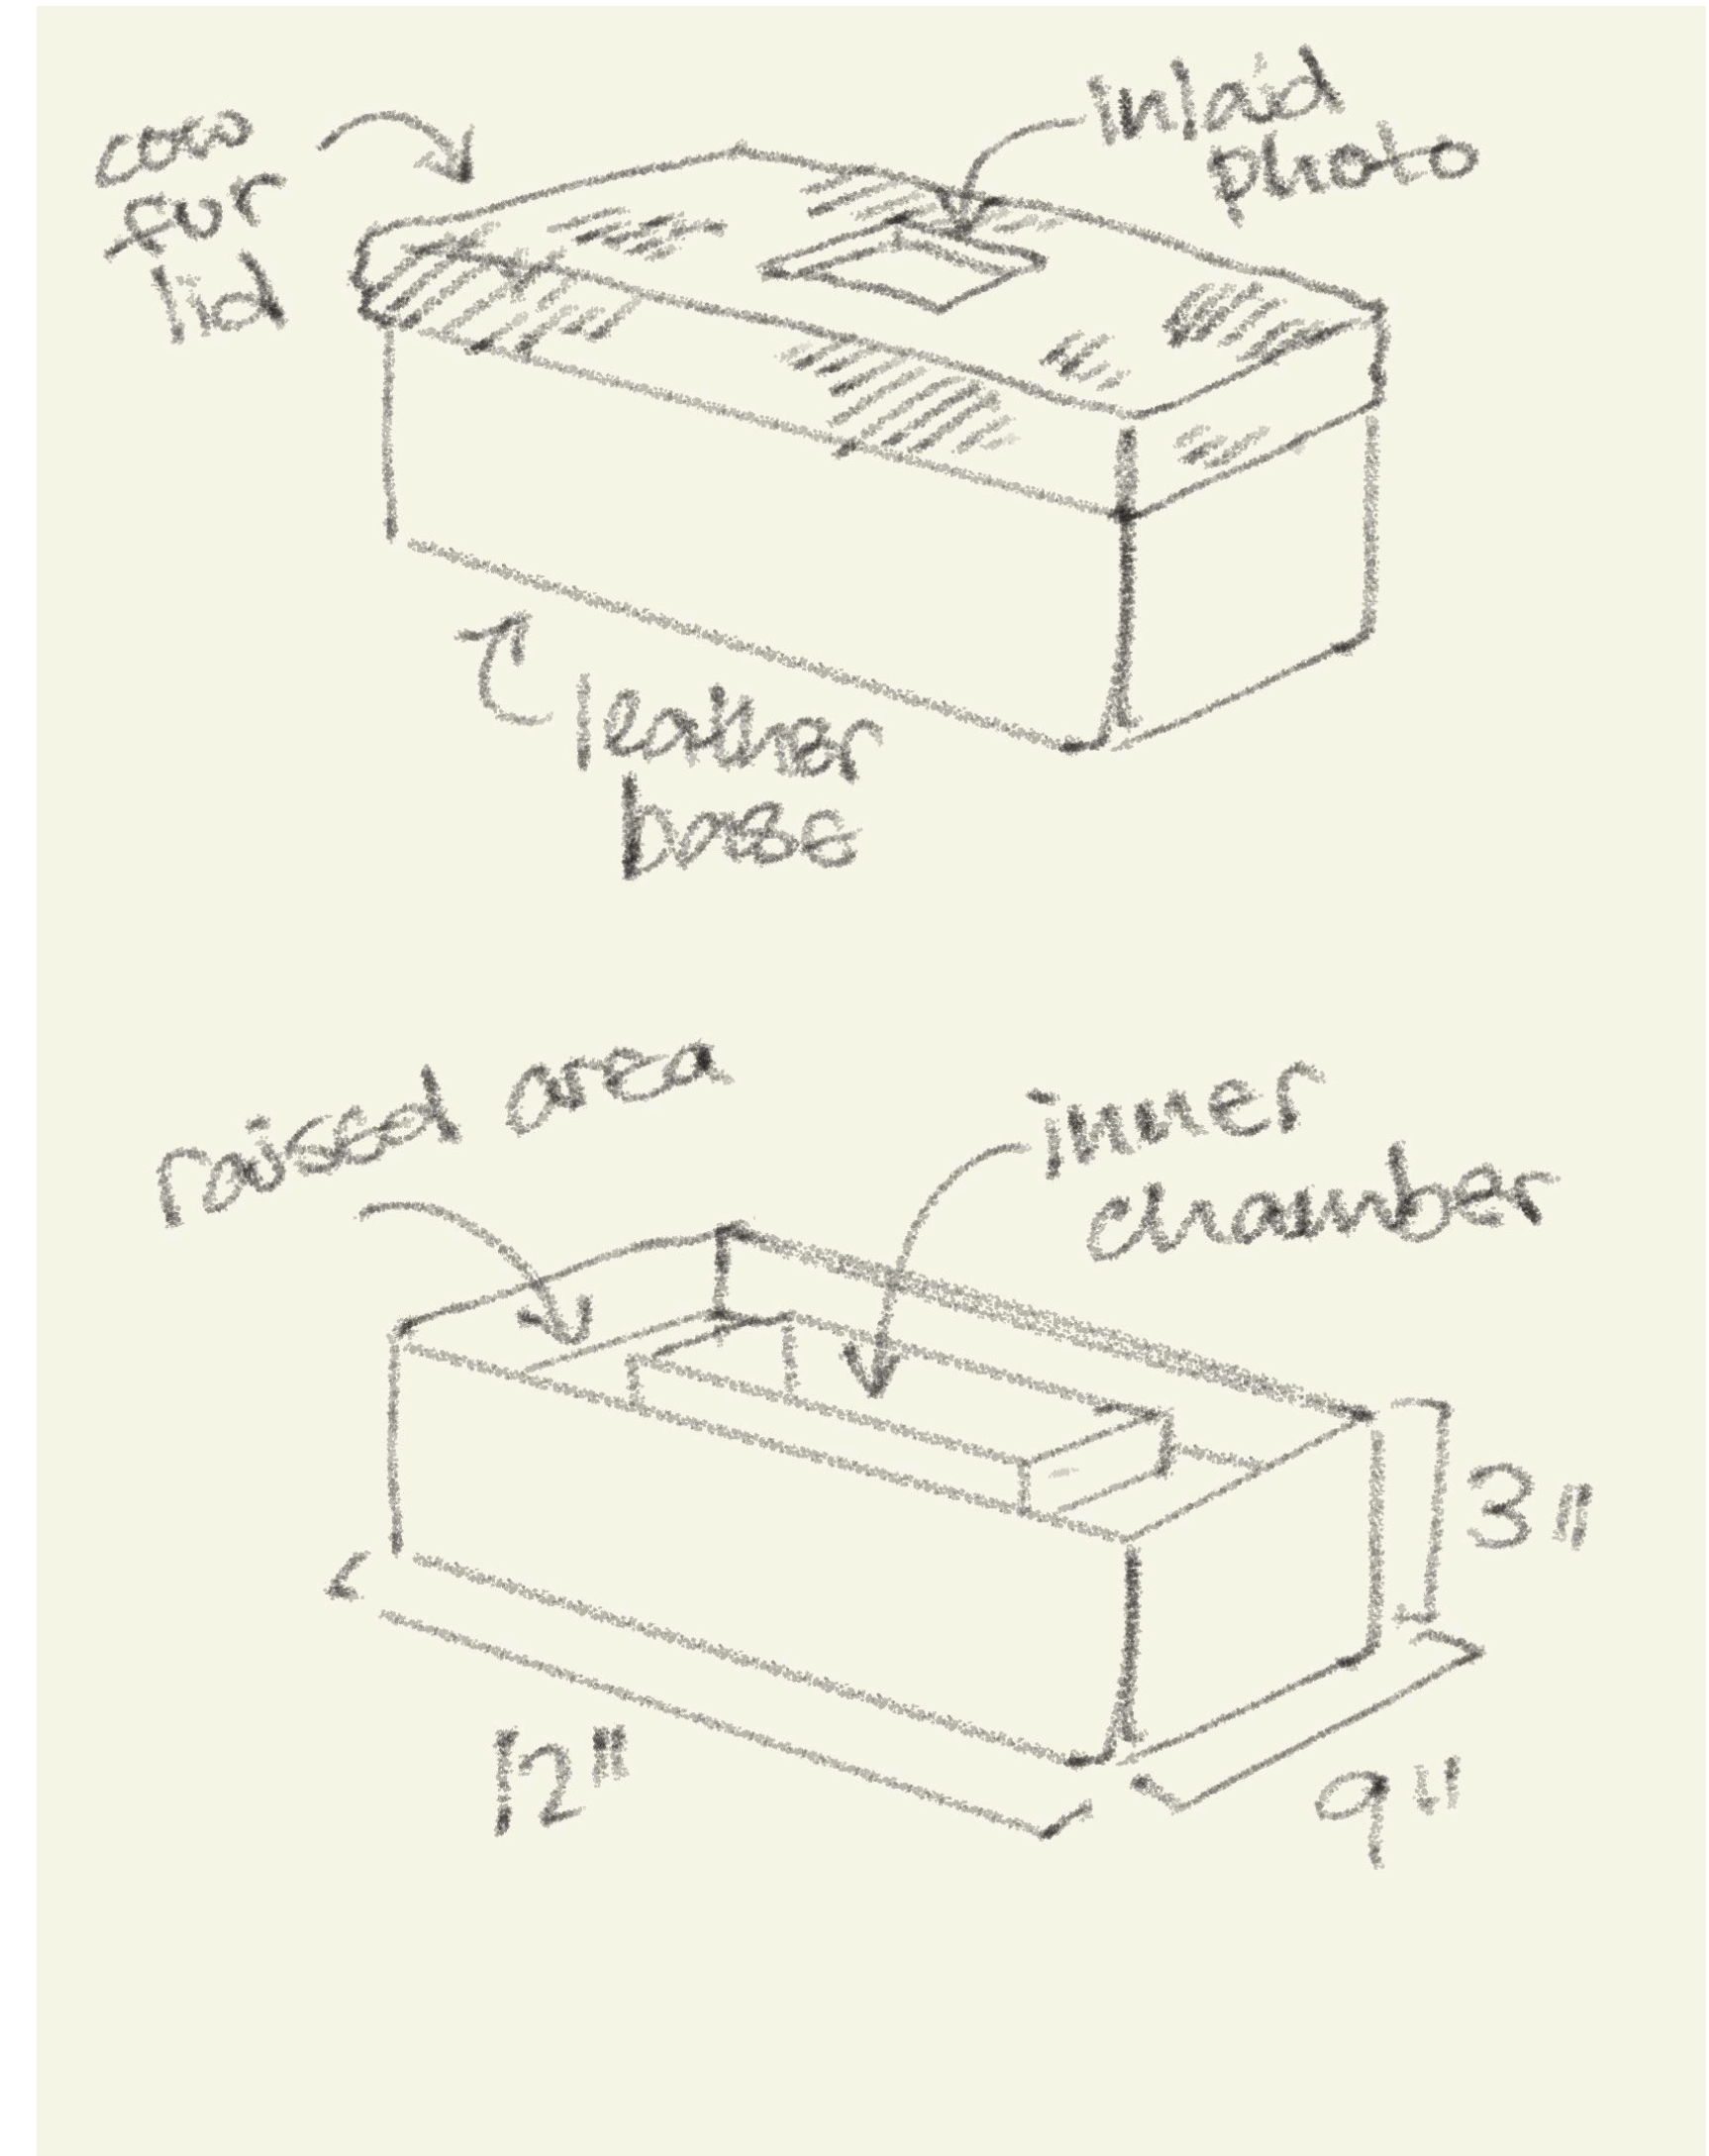

Form

Shoebox-sized container that opens to divided space. These two areas may be engaged with in any order, which may influence perception of experience.

Inner Chamber: Collected Texas Longhorns ephemera. Instructs user on “how to be a Longhorn”

Outer Chamber: Where my family story is told. User opens box to book folded at the bottom, then literally unfolds my life around Longhorn football.

Box Materials

Cow Fur

Outside lid of box.

Leather

Outside bottom of box.

Satin

Whole interior of box.

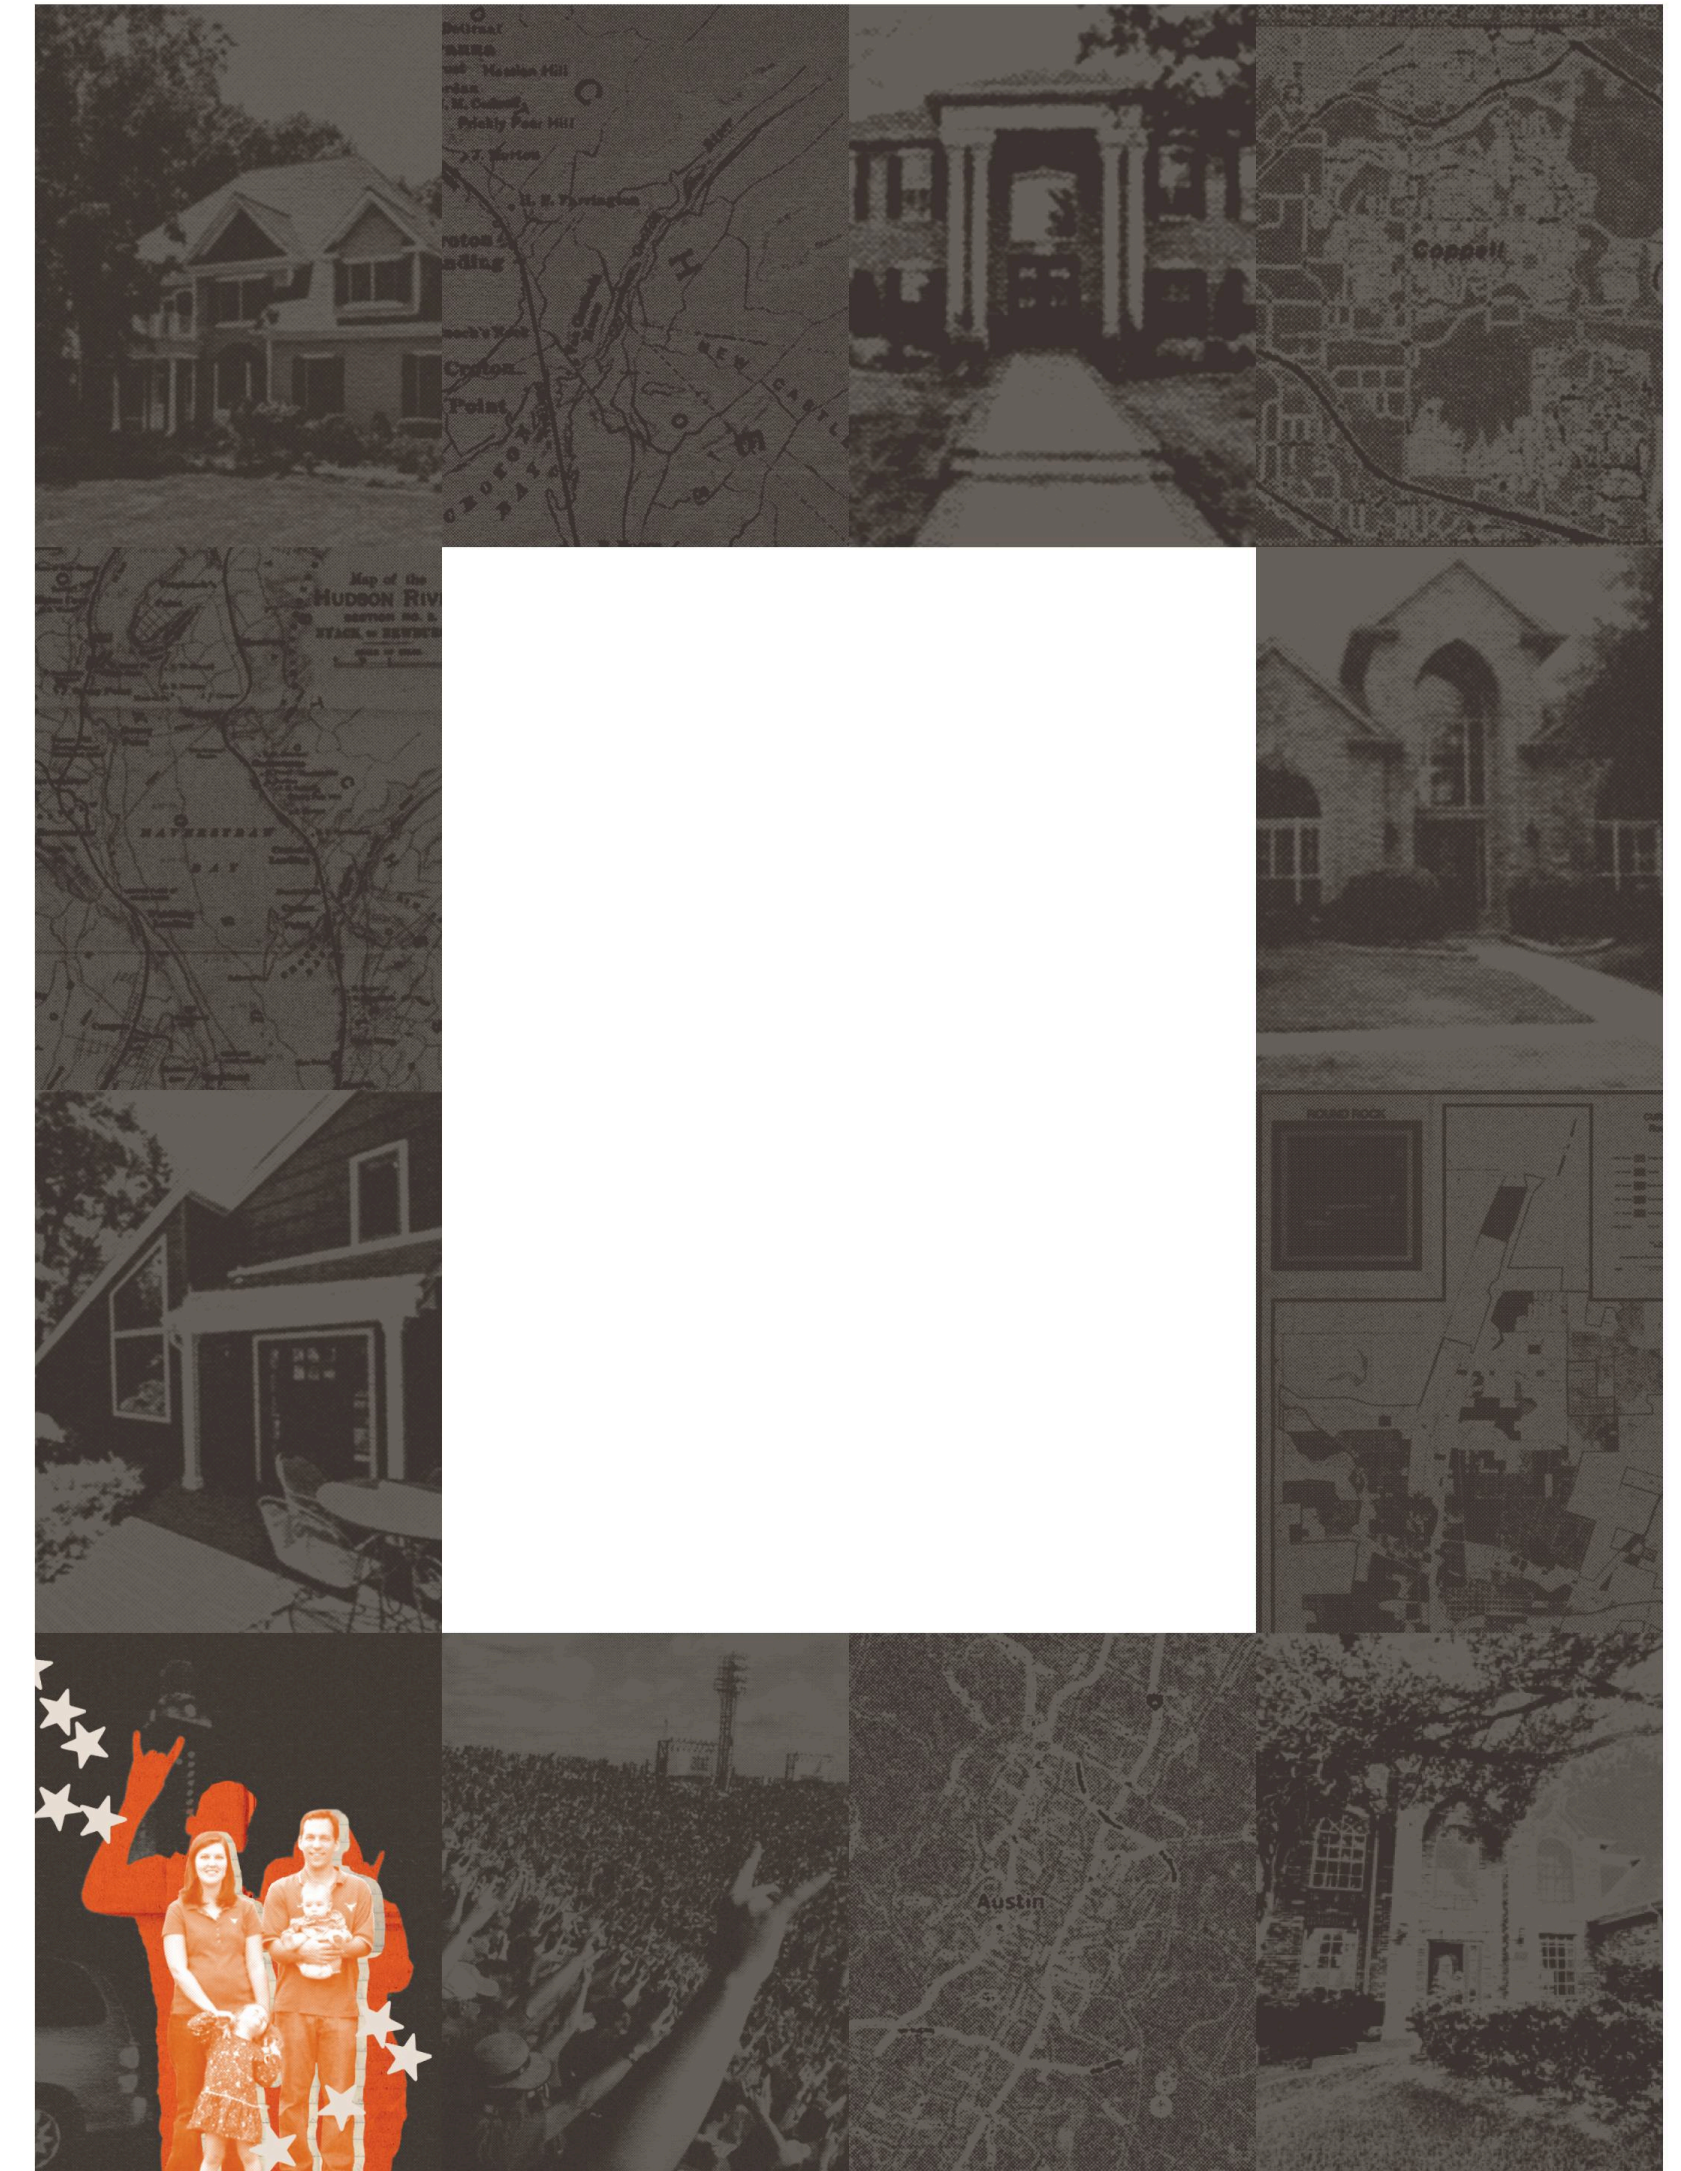

The Book

Upwards Side: Sequential images from my childhood collaged with photos of the games and other events, provided by my parents. Burnt orange brings out the figures and emphasizes family connection.

The Book (Part 2)

Inverse Side: Photos of each of the houses I have lived in alongside maps of the towns. Visible while flipping through the upwards side to emphasize presence of change, yet continuity of this love.

Ephemera

Inner chamber includes various ephemera sourced from internet archives and Longhorn traditions. Printed on various textured papers depending on content for aged, delicate feel.

- Texas Fight sheet music
- The story of Bevo (Longhorns mascot)
- Portraits of Bevo
- Photos of DKR-Texas Memorial Stadium
- Photos of Longhorn icons like Smokey the Cannon, Big Bertha, and the UT Tower
- Game program covers
- Game tickets
- & more!
